of assistant, associate, or full professor dependent on qualifications. We value diversity and seek individuals committed to inclusive practices in education.

The Program and Department. Occupational Therapy at Temple is nationally recognized for its educational programs and research, based on the philosophy that humans are occupational beings able to maximize their health and quality of life when engaged in meaningful activity. Our faculty are recognized for leading scholarship in the areas of arts accessibility and inclusion, person-environment interactions, assistive technology, and trauma informed care. There are 120 students in the M.O.T. and post-professional O.T.D. programs. On July 1, 2019, OT will join Athletic Training (M.S.A.T. and D.A.T.), Physical Therapy (D.P.T.), Recreational Therapy (B.S. and M.S.), Neuromotor Science interdisciplinary programs (M.S. and Ph.D.), and the B.S. in Health Professions, which enrolls over 1,000 students planning to attend graduate school in a clinical discipline, in a newly formed Department of Health and Rehabilitation Sciences. The new department with 40 faculty and nearly 1,600 students will produce practitioners and researchers prepared and acculturated to improve health and lived experiences. This realignment of existing disciplines and programs into a single unit creates an opportunity to define professional practice and educational endeavors in concert with the College's public health programs, making the College uniquely grounded in improving the health of individuals, families and populations. Key elements include a vertical integration and balance of programs across undergraduate, professional and doctoral levels; continued advancement of the science, education and practice of individual professions; fostering all faculty and students as leaders in individual disciplines and also as interprofessional educators and practitioners; and establishment of partnerships in education, research and service between clinical and public health practitioners.

The College. Devoted to an interprofessional environment for academic programming and research, the College of Public Health, a CEPH-accredited school of public health, is a constellation of academic units of public health, social work and health profession disciplines, enrolling 4,300 students. The College's research focuses on social, behavioral, and environmental inquiries, medical/health interventions, and basic science and is sponsored by the National Institutes of Health, National Science Foundation, Department of Defense, and other major funders. The College has recently launched a new Center focused on Community Engaged Research and Practice.

The University. Temple is an urban, research-intensive Carnegie R1 university located in historic and culturally rich Philadelphia, the nation's 6th largest city. The city was ranked 3rd by the New York Times as a world tourist destination. The National Science Foundation ranks Temple among the top 100 universities in the country for research expenditures. Temple is the 6th largest provider of professional education in the nation and includes Schools of Medicine, Pharmacy, Podiatry, Law, and Dentistry and research centers including CPH's Center for Obesity Research and Education.
