Job Description

The University of South Carolina, College of Nursing (CON) is seeking a qualified candidate eligible for the rank of Clinical Assistant or Clinical Associate Professor to fill a full-time academic teaching position. The faculty member would provide didactic and clinical instruction for undergraduate acute care nursing courses. In addition to teaching, the position includes opportunities for clinical practice and research/scholarship activities. Faculty appointment and salary are commensurate with the level of clinical practice, teaching, and scholarship experience of the candidate.

The ideal candidate will possess knowledge or experience teaching acute and complex disease problems and skills required of the BSN graduate. Experience with the application of innovative classroom delivery, simulation methodologies and evidence based integration is ideal. The candidate should have a demonstrated commitment to the professional development of nursing students, clinical practice, and professional service.

Earned a doctorate in nursing (Ph.D. or DNP), two years of teaching and mentoring of BSN students preferred; unencumbered nursing licensure; Excellent written and oral communication skills, team building, self-motivation, and innovation in educational program offerings are expected. Basic Life Support (BLS) documentation is required.
