Posting Detail Information

Position Summary

The Department of Exercise and Nutrition Sciences within the School of Public Health and Health Professions invites applications for a full-time, 12-month Clinical Assistant Professor position as Clinical Director for Strength and Conditioning. This role offers an exciting opportunity to contribute to academic excellence, clinical innovation, and interdisciplinary collaboration in a dynamic educational environment.

Key Responsibilities:

- Lead the development and expansion of new clinical placement sites.
- Design, develop, and teach new academic courses aligned with program goals and SUNY standards.
- Expectations to carry a teaching load up to 12 credit hours per semester (equivalent of three 3-4 credit courses), depending on the amount of scholarship and service. Teaching assignments will include the fall, spring, and summer terms.
- Prepare and manage documentation required for program accreditation and compliance.
- Collaborate collegially with faculty and staff across the Department of Exercise and Nutrition Sciences, other academic units, and Athletics.
- Engage with external stakeholders including clinical placement supervisors, preceptors, and accreditation staff to ensure high-quality experiential learning.

About the Department

The Department of Exercise and Nutrition Sciences is one of the academic units in the School of Public Health & Health Professions.
